

SNAKES IN THE SHELTER!

Sometimes we find really big snakes in our shelter in Baan Taling Ngam.

We found this Python the 28.08.2011 in the cat area. I am very surprised because the cat area has a high wall and on top of the wall is a 1,5 m fence, so how the snake came in is a big question for me! Pythons are not poison but for small cute animals they are really dangerous. The Pythons are known for strangle their prey. Normally we face cobras in our shelter and many animals have lost their life already. We called Phill from the snake farm to come and pick up the snake. He forced the snake to throw up the cat and brought the snake to the snake farm nearby. Thank you Phill!

You can see how the snake is throwing up the cat on the videos on the link below:

The snake below attacked the dogs outside our home in Chaweng. The snake is not that poison it will kill but if the dogs get bitten they will have a lot of pain! My helpers decide to kill the snake because the dogs attack the snake over and over again just for playing but off course the snake have to defend him self and tried to bite the dogs.
